PROMISED LAND

by Peter Griffith

Ravi and his mother have escaped from the civil war in their homeland, and made their way to Europe. After two years in detention centre they are given asylum and can start a new life in Britain. But when they move into their new house, Ravi finds that their troubles are only just beginning:

The street is dominated by a group of young racists known as the Gough Street Gang. Will the gang succeed in driving Ravi and his mother away? Or will Ravi finally be accepted, and able to feel at home?
